KAUFF BREAKS HIS BALL BATS WHEN HE FAILS TO GET A HIT

Temperamental Baseball Player Declares Bats are "Untrue" to Him; He Buys Four Automobiles in One Season, Getting Rid of One After Another, and is Beau Brummel of Game; 30 Suits of Clothes.

EW TORK, Jan 14.—Beany Eauff is a figure unique in baseball history. As temperamental as a prima donna and as changrable in his moods as April weather, he is a changrable in his moods as April weather, he is a changrable in his moods as April weather, he is a changrable in his moods as April weather, he is a changrable in his moods as April weather, he is a changrable in his moods as April weather, he is a changrable in his moods as April weather, he is a changrable in his moods as April weather, he is a changrable in his moods as April weather, he is a changrable in his moods as April weather, he is a changrable in his moods as April weather, he is a changrable in his moods as April weather, he is a changrable in his moods and any other glayer—or any six other players—or any six other players—or any six other players—in the game, and the first fine he as a season with 2 new hats and gets in a new assortment every six weeks or so. If Kauff hits a fly the first time he uses a bat he hreaks it immediately. If he gets a hit with a bat in its first use he declares the bat "a regular club." Should he had out a fly or strike out the next time he uses the club he doesn't break it immediately. He decides to give it the holder channes as a roward for getting a hit for him the first time he used the mood and third cars secured by the his regular schelling he had out a fly or strike out the service of $450 in price.

Nathan Kendall, president of the Southwestern Golf association, and a prominent member of the Tucson Golf and Country club, sends this philosophical observation to president W. F. Payns, of the El Paso Country club:

"While there is a more or less serious side to golf, as is evidenced by well trained young men striving for the honor of champion of the smithwest, there is another side which appears to those on the sunset side of 55, and those whose desired scores represent what they would like to buy their honds and some of their stocks at, and whose actual scores are what they would like to buy their honds and some of their stocks at, and whose actual scores are what they would like thereafier to sell the same for.

The G. A. R. Players.

The G. A. H. Pinyers.

The G. A. R. Pinyers.

"Some of un are G. A. R. pinyers, out in '61 and back in '55, but we enjoy the game really more than those who strive and years for pars and bozers, and why is it? Merely the sociability and good fellowship of it, without the responsibility. With some of us, making a par bole is occasion for reloicing, with others, a matter of course.

"At the tournament there is a welcome for both chases, the G. A. R. and the P. A. P's. If there are other classes, there is a welcome for them. We are out for a good time; are you with us?

"Bring or send as many of the members as you can. The association is out for business; the Golf club is out for fun. John us in making this una magnifica fiests."

JAMES E. GAFFNEY and Robert H. Davis, late owners of the Boston Braves, have no intention of staying out of baseball, even though they sold the Beantown club to a Boston syndicate. They have admitted that they will try to buy either the Giants or Yankees.

HARRY SINCLAIR, Oklahoma oil magnate and former Fed "angel," jokingly remarks that he hasn't enough money left to buy a fran-chise in a major league. "Seriously, though," he adds, "I have given up hope of ever buying myself back into baseball." And there is gnashing of teeth in O. B. circles for Sinclair looked good for further picking.

HEINE WAGNER, looked upon a few years ago as one of the greatest shortstops in baseball, has been given his unconditional release by the Boston Red Sox. He joined that team in 1906 but in recent years he has been a substitute. The great ones don't last forever.

JIM THORPE, the great indian athlete who is a member of the Giants' baseball squad until McGraw can find some spot to place him in the minors, was a great subject for press dope for a long while. Lately Jim has been out of the spotlight, so his personal press agent has started a story to the effect that Jim is the champion eater among base-ball players. That press agent should get back to the burlesque game and the stolen jewels. Ask any baseball magnate and he'll tell you, after a glance over the eating house bills, that his players eat more than any other aggregation playing the game.

SAN ANTONIO wants to get into the championship light game and Joe Golden has made an offer of a purse of $15,000 for Freddie Welsh to meet Charlie White there for the lightweight title. Well, Joe will get a little advertising but he'll have to .aise his ante if he means business. UMPIRES cannot act as scouts for baseball clubs or write signed articles for the newspapers, if the National league magnates get their way. These conditions have been put in the new contracts and it is said that the American league will adopt similar regulations.
